William Cummings and Robert Parker were the first white men to spend a winter in Provo Valley. In the winter of 1858 they wintered a small bunch of sheep on Daniels Creek, about where the county road now crosses old Daniels Creek between Heber and Charleston.

When the surveying was completed the land left over was distributed to the people by Thomas Rasband.

A school house was built within the fort. It was a log structure, forty feet long and twenty feet wide. There was a fireplace in each end and a stage ten by twelve feet was built on the west side. The first school teacher was Henry I. Young.

Thomas Rasband was the first presiding elder and held this position until the appointment of the following by the church officials: William M. Wall, Presiding Elder, John M. Murdock, First Counselor, Robert S. Duke, Second Counselor.

The first white child born in the valley was Timpanogas Davidson. Charles Thomas was the first white man to be married in the valley.

The squares represent the approximate relative locations of the houses occupied by the families of those whose names appear in line with the squares. Corrals were located back of houses and outside the square.
